GOLLY GOSH-YOU MIGHT CATCH SOMETHNG!

In support of genetic essentialism, one study utilizing nationally representative data found that people who attributed genetic factors as a cause of schizophrenia also believed that the problem was persistent and transmissible to family members [32]. In a vignette experiment where the genetic etiology of a mental disorder was randomly varied, Phelan [30] found that a genetic attribution significantly increased perceptions that a mental illness was serious and lasting, and that family members were likely to develop it. Participants in this sample also desired more social distance from the sibling of a person with a mental illness where genetic etiology was offered as an explanation.

Genetic mental illness stigma

The increasing interest in the genetic causes of mental disorders may exacerbate existing stigma if negative beliefs about a genetic illness are generally accepted. China's history of policy-level eugenics and genetic discrimination in the workplace suggests that Chinese communities will view genetic mental illness less favorably than mental illness with non-genetic causes. The aim of this study is to identify differences between Chinese Americans and European Americans in eugenic beliefs and stigma toward people with genetic mental illness.

While many of the attitudes and behaviors described above may be deeply rooted in traditional beliefs, cultural change is likely to interact with such conceptions [23]. National culture has long been shown to highly influence individual attitudes towards mental illness [24–26]. The ever-increasing interest in genetics is of particular importance because it proposes highly publicized, plausible, but controversial explanations for the etiology of psychiatric disease that could challenge the current stigma paradigm.

Although genetic explanations for illness might be de-stigmatizing by absolving the affected individual of blame or responsibility [27, 28], one anticipated risk of the genetic revolution and its impact on mental illness stigma can be captured in the theory of genetic essentialism, which is the popular idea that genes are largely deterministic of individual characteristics and behavior [29]. In genetic essentialism, the presence or absence of a crucial gene first reinforces cognitive separation, or the “normal versus deviant” dichotomy in the stigma labeling process [30]. The stigmatized individual is thus viewed as more fundamentally “different” due to the deviance in his/her genetic makeup. Secondly, because genes can be transmitted from parent to child, a genetically transmitted mental illness can be shared by family members. A pathogenic gene provides an additional and tangible link that not only associates family members with a stigmatized trait, but arouses suspicion that they actually possess the trait themselves. Thirdly, the view that genes are the “essence” of a human being is likely to also dictate that a genetically based mental illness is persistent and unchangeable, especially because genes are not (yet) alterable. Finally, for all of the above reasons, any genetic problem may be considered to be more serious than one with no genetic basis, thus leading to discrimination based on genetic status [31]. Genetic essentialism thus predicts that people will be less willing to interact intimately with a person with a genetic mental illness and will disapprove of him/her getting married or having children.

In support of genetic essentialism, one study utilizing nationally representative data found that people who attributed genetic factors as a cause of schizophrenia also believed that the problem was persistent and transmissible to family members [32]. In a vignette experiment where the genetic etiology of a mental disorder was randomly varied, Phelan [30] found that a genetic attribution significantly increased perceptions that a mental illness was serious and lasting, and that family members were likely to develop it. Participants in this sample also desired more social distance from the sibling of a person with a mental illness where genetic etiology was offered as an explanation.

ARE WE CHINESE?

Genetics and mental illness in Chinese communities

Although social causes in China are often linked to beliefs of moral contamination, very little is known about how genetic attributions might influence views of mental illness among Chinese groups. One logical point of departure is to examine community attitudes toward genetics and perceptions about genetic influences on health, family choices, and daily life. Within this spectrum, eugenic attitudes may capture negative and stigmatizing perspectives about supposed “genetic” personal characteristics.

China's history of policy-level eugenics suggests that the genetic revolution will increase stigmatizing attitudes and behaviors. National eugenic beliefs have been historically used as justification for population control in China. In 1994, the Chinese government passed an internationally criticized law requiring premarital examination for hereditary illnesses, including mental disorders, that denied a license to anyone deemed 'unfit' for marriage [33]'. Article 38 of the law specified 'relevant mental illnesses' as 'schizophrenia, manic-depressive psychosis and other mental diseases of a serious nature'. If the examining physician found evidence of these disorders, the couple was asked to postpone or cancel their marriage or else agree never to bear children (Articles 9 and 10). Principles of eugenics have motivated marriage restrictions in China since the 1930s, and similar laws and regulations were enacted from 1950 to 1986, often including abortion of malformed fetuses and sterilization of those with mental disorders in some provinces [34–36].,

Well, that gem considered a 'rottweiler' by her supposed nearest and dearest- she and the witch can go chopping off the boys' little fingers and adding them to their xmas brew- why not- rory thinks she would be escaping anyway while he husband gets together w. his secretary, Gordon says he can't stand her (prefers the domestic or his 'man friend')and avoids clan gatherings at xmas etc, and the witch will do anything to get in to see her 'beloved 'grandchildren' especially when she's not wanted- that gem apparently has terrible mood swings- ups and downs and arounds- me and g too good for Sorn and the Sornies anyways- who wants the outside door kicked in anyone? blame it all on the Rottweiler and her phantom pregnancies!.....from the Tasmanian Devil

the poop lady and the other McIntyre girls and their witch mother can keep their xmas washing up present to themselves thankyouvery much

i think they liked gemma for her old bf and his drugs- so sorry he got locked up!! early to bed for the sad case baby bores now!i wonder if he's bitching about her as well-she'd probably be better off getting high in the cells with him eh than picking up poop

In fact all the macintyre in' law girls are a sad square bunch of rabid baby bores with no decent conversation otherwise, avoiding everything else except their precious little ones. apart from that Amy can only talk about one certain brother- as if that's all we'd be interested in- fellow crazies eh, as for the only tory in Scotland she only seem to ever have one change of clothes - eats only pizza. as for the infamous Lara- i don't see why we ought to be forced to spend certain celebration time with a bunch of strangers- they may be getting married but to all intents and purposes they spend all thier time avoiding each other- god knows why?

al those years ago- we were in Canada, g had got turned down aggressively by his family for a little bit of his own money- of course I had my own money- out of which we had to pay for lawyers, accommodation and bail as he had had a wee panic attack on the plane- despite the fact that we had each had our own money - thousands of pounds of my money had been in journalism school in London which we had lost as I had been taking good care of gavin - the silly old woman was instead of helping was making life hell for us even ore and accusing me of all sorts- when we got back eventually due to her bribes and cronies being set off on us and us ending up in emigration- g had got in trouble due to having apparently missed a bail appointmet-and me lumped in to it as we're married! he was well but she set the pigs at ayr hop onto us at the airport upon our return- gavin was very upset he had to go back to the hospital- and then we went off to Ireland- his family were all getting married and calling him crazy at their weddings when they had been causing problems- why do they want him to be 'unwell'? G got brought back from Ireland by the cops who managed to get me in trouble for no reason under rasciterrorism laws-and stop and search- due to their provocations and aggressive behaviour and we must have been bribed too- this they have never let me forget and still use it against me to this day when I had forgotten about it- i'm not the one who is a criminal here- excuse me! so then they decided to accuse me of a) being after his money 2) 'so called criminality and c) not supporting Gavin with meds- which hadn't been the case at all- apart from that i'm not a nurse- excuse me! I am not their slave- I took good care of G and that's all the thanks I got- instead of my money being returned the silly old woman thought she could pull a fast one and manipulate/threaten Gavin into writing a will! and getting a Dvs with the help of the doctors who wanted to even initially deny that we were married as of course they deny everything else in the name of their beloved medicine and 'treatment'-well the effects of those medicines are not good at all- they don't tell you that though- and the effects of the treatment meant Gavin was suddenly doing all sorts of terrible terrible crazy stuff where he had been fine before! I mean- all of a sudden asking him to make a will and get a dvs behind his wife's back when he's in hospital surely not legal nor ethical? and then she set the pigs onto me- who were stalking me as I was cycling or something- just to send me to the dump to inform me of the dvs- when G was actually in a hell of a state and they wouldn't tell me where he was- and he was doing all sorts of crazy stuff due to her bullying and abuse and ended up back in that dump and she was still trying to make him get dvs etc- how can anyone survive like that? When we got back together, she was still trying to make him do crazy stuff - he got rescued from the north sea and the Thames-because of her- where I know he had been fine and happy before- we both had- and then she was so please she thought she got an unpaid nurse which was the only thing she ever gave me any credit for- fake- and then we had won Gavin and I and she got him onto the CTO and me in order to make life hell for us through the chavs- which has led to this- despite the fact that we've been quite happy thank-you very much- she has been trying to wrestle our lives away and make it hell for us- she's a total fake two time bitch slut and why should I be nice to her and her family anymore? To Gav's Friends - Please help get Gav discharged asap, he has been in hospital for a ridiculous amount of time this summer, despite being quite well. he had actually been discharged a couple of times, but allegedly due to a missed appointment they took him in again.(more post-discharge harassment!) The police and hospital have been harassing us, for instance house break-ins, searches without any reason, antagonism, theft of personal property, negligence etc...the list goes on. it all started when we were in a very minor accident with a lampost. There has been nothing the matter health-wise, but the way we have been treated is beyond ridiculous - there is a lot of discrimination in the system. The way people get treated in those dumps is not beneficial to anybody's health - except perhaps the paypacket of the staff and pls. I am sure Gav would appreciate a phone call or two, it's very boring in the Edinburgh Royal. Gav and I want our life back, and our HUMAN RIGHTS. S and G
